Holy Cow! It's The Computer Game

HOME ALONE NOW AVAILABLE

Based on the Mega-hit movie, HOME ALONE puts you in the role of eight-year-old Kevin, trying to foil the break-in of those two inept burglars, Harry and Marv. In the first phase of the game, you rush throughout your gigantic home creating traps and pitfalls. From the attic to the basement, the tree house, big brother Buzz's cluttered bedroom and the dozens of rooms in between, you'll find innumerable household items to aid in your defense. Armed with imagination and a BB-Gun, you can create a wealth of clever contraptions, but time is limited. Will you be ready for the Wet Bandit Gang?

Soon, Harry and Marv come bumbling in for a hilarious chase as you try to lure them into your snares and ploys. Will they succeed in catching you or can you hold out until Mom arrives in this playful quest to protect your home...ALONE.

Slapstick humor, comic twists and infinite variations of play, turn HOME ALONE -- The Family Comedy Without The Family -- into exciting computer action for the entire clan.

BILL & TED'S EXCELLENT ADVENTURE

Hey Dudes! You're going on a most excellent adventure through history. You know the whacked-out, time-warped trip we had in the movie. Now, in the BILL & TED'S most excellent computer game, you'll meet some neat dead dudes, too - though you'll need more that two to pass that most heinous history exam.

At the Circle K, meet Rufus, an ultra-cool messenger and his time traveling phone booth. Just dial a year and take off in time. You're looking for a bodacious bunch of historical heavyweights to bring back to San Dimas High. This is an excellent arcade/action adventure, but only the coolest of dudes will be triumphant!

The animation and graphics are incredible. There's stuff digitized right outta the movie and some really neat sounds. Whoa! There's even four levels of difficulty to make this totally not easy.

Available for IBM, C-64 and Amiga.
For IBM: CGA/EGA (384K) and VGA (512K). Supports the Ad Lib Sound Card. Joystick is optional.
Suggested retail price of $29.95 for IBM and C-64, $39.95 for Amiga.
